

STUDENTS WITH DISABILITIES

ONLY students with documented disabilities need to complete and return this form

Leaving high school to enter college brings changes with respect to educational rights and responsibilities for students with disabilities. In high school the law required the school to determine the disability and the support needed. Different laws apply when you are in college. These laws put the responsibility for self-disclosure on the student. You must let us know if you have a disability in order to receive reasonable accommodations. Such disabilities include, but are not limited to, physical disabilities, visual or hearing impairments, learning disabilities, Autism Spectrum Disorder, and Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD).

IMPORTANT:

Students requesting accommodations or other support services are required to submit documentation to verify eligibility for protection under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act. The provision of reasonable accommodations and services is based upon assessment of the current impact of the student's disability on a major life activity, such as learning.

Documentation of your disability should reflect the findings of a comprehensive assessment completed preferably within the past three years. Documentation of this assessment must be from a person licensed to make such a diagnosis. An IEP from high school may also be included.
