2009-2010 FISCAL YEAR

President's REPORT

From the PRESIDENT

Our combination of careful spending and bold initiatives continues to keep us healthy during this uneasy economy.

We are keenly attentive to our four strategic priorities:

- Tell a compelling institutional story to draw resources to the College.
- Be “mission centered and market smart” to maximize the College’s impact in the world.
- Recruit and graduate a student body large enough to utilize optimally the College’s resources.
- Generate a financial margin sufficient to support the College’s mission and vision.

Our focused efforts are necessary, but not sufficient to accomplish our mission. While our endowment ended the fiscal year on the climb, uncertainty still awaits.

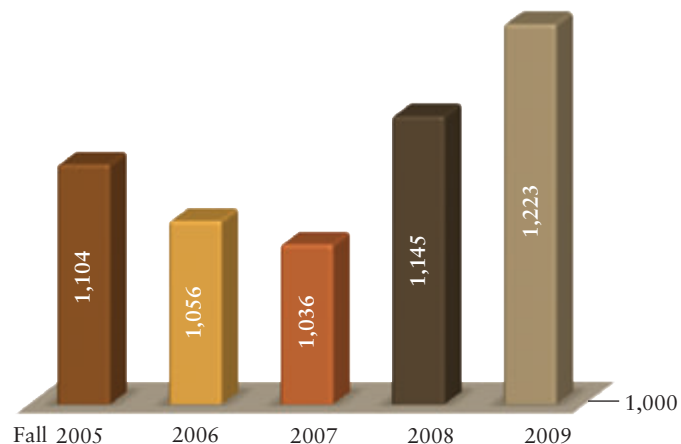

Mission Statement

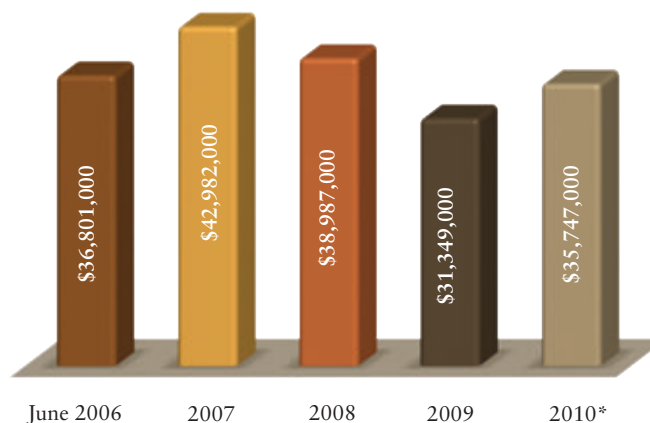

Manchester College respects the infinite worth of every individual and graduates persons of ability and conviction who draw upon their education and faith to lead principled, productive, and compassionate lives that improve the human condition.

Recruiting more students has strengthened our financial stability. We posted another very strong year with enrollment continuing its steady increase. In 2009, we fielded an extraordinary 40,627 inquiries from high school students to build our largest class of first-year students in decades. Our admissions team engaged faculty, current students, coaches and staff across the campus in helping a record 1,223 students find their places at Manchester. We expect strong enrollment this fall.

ENDOWMENT

We made maximum use of our residence halls and brought refurbished Holl-Kintner classrooms online. While the Manchester tradition of engaged, passionate teaching endures, the surge of students who have lived with information technology all their lives heightens our need for modern, “smart” classrooms. More than ever, we need the new Academic Center.

The College took a strategic approach to all decisions, from three very bold new graduate and professional programs to faculty hiring. The Higher Learning Commission approved our proposals for master’s degrees in athletic training and education. Both programs began enrolling students for classes this fall.

In October 2009, the Board of Trustees unanimously put Manchester on track for its first doctoral program: a School of Pharmacy to be located in Fort Wayne. The College has made enthusiastic new friends and partners in northeast Indiana's health care, economic development, education and government communities, as well as in Congress. Our very experienced founding dean has already begun building a leadership team to pursue accreditation, funding, curriculum development and enrollment for the first class in fall 2012.

Strategic Priorities

1. Tell a compelling institutional story to draw resources to the College.
2. Be "mission centered and market smart" to enhance student learning and maximize the College's impact in the world.
3. Recruit and graduate a student body large enough to utilize optimally the College's resources.
4. Generate a financial margin sufficient to support the College's mission and vision.

Because of the drop in the value of the endowment, we did not draw from it this past year, using operational income instead to underwrite $10.4 million in scholarships. And when Indiana announced a significant cut in state aid in late summer 2009, we reduced budgets again to redirect $1.1 million in additional MC aid for financially strapped families.

Our Master Plan matured into “Master Projects” with removal of the 94-year-old Communication Building, which opened green space in the historic core of campus. In just six months, we added to the PERC with two “smart” classrooms, enhanced athletic training facilities and offices, and two new locker rooms.

THE MANCHESTER FUND

Many groups contribute to our successes: faculty and staff who grasp each challenge and opportunity, new friends in Fort Wayne, Indianapolis and Washington ... and our thousands of generous donors committed to our mission.

Alumni remained faithful to the College in their giving, and we are grateful. The numbers and percentage of alumni giving remained level, and we welcomed 563 new donors to The Manchester Fund. We added 14 newly endowed memorial funds. Continued strong support for the College was particularly important during the recession, and we are deeply grateful.

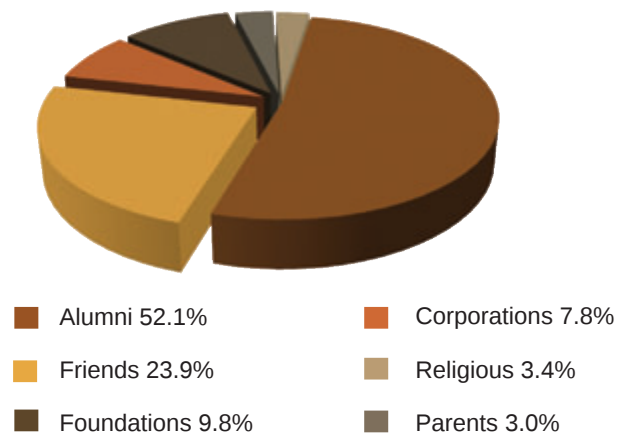

Lyrics from an old hymn by Harry Emerson Fosdick come to mind: “We cease to water gardens when comes Thy plenteous rain.” We approach our lives most days with the sense that it is our efforts alone that make things grow. There is also a power beyond all of us that brings us resources, too. The wide-spread support from our alumni and friends achieves our mission to graduate persons of ability and conviction.

That’s the bottom line: Students come first.

2009-2010 Highlights

The bottom line: Students come first

Campus-wide, budget belts were tightened to raise $1.1 million to help 600 of the College's neediest families offset large last-minute cuts to student state aid. Partnerships in loan forgiveness and first-generation programs augmented $10.4 million in MC scholarships.

Helping students = more students

The College added more than 21 class sections, beefed up dining options and moved in more beds to accommodate a second straight year of record enrollment. The official total soared to 1,223, including 426 first-year students (a 26-year record), to maximize use of the College's resources.

Coming soon, a School of Pharmacy

A four-year Doctor of Pharmacy program supports the College's mission to improve the human condition, the Board of Trustees unanimously agreed in October. Following a nationwide search, founding dean Dr. Philip Medon arrived. Pending accreditation, the school will welcome its first students to a central Fort Wayne campus in fall 2012.

Achieving extraordinary scholarship

Ecologist Jerry Sweeten '75 traveled to Washington, D.C., for recognition as the 2009 Indiana Professor of the Year. Tyler Secor '10 took the stage, too, with MC's first student music composition recital. Students presented graduate-level scholarship on Japanese culture, working class students and a scarce fish to win the Student Research Symposium. And, yet another Fulbright: Nicole Hammond '10 will teach English in Indonesia.

Building on strengths

Two new master's degrees will help maximize the College's impact on the world. The Master of Education program will give professional educators (including many MC graduates) opportunity to continuously improve their teaching, and the Master of Athletic Training program will help students who did not major in the field prepare for certification.

Fundraising surprises and records

Many donors struggled to find their balance in a rollercoaster market, but still remembered the College. A surprise "no-strings-attached" $700,000 bequest from Florence E. Sanders '48 and Lucile V. Sanders '47 and their sister Ethel and a record-setting $215,370 student Phonathon helped support strong academic programs.

Spreading the news about Manchester

"When Samantha Chapman chose to go to Manchester College last year ..." That was how The Wall Street Journal began a feature with campus photos about three-year bachelor's degrees. As the College continues to speak out about affordable and accessible higher education, media outlets nationwide are telling the Manchester story, including CNN, The Chronicle of Higher Education, The Indianapolis Star and other TV stations and newspapers.

Remembering roots in peace and faith

Manchester watered its deep roots in peacemaking and the Church of the Brethren. The editor of the Brethren Messenger magazine arrived as new campus pastor and hundreds gathered to dedicate a permanent MC exhibit celebrating Heifer International founder Dan West '17. As the Plowshares peace studies grant concluded, so did programming for Indianapolis Peace Institute. The collaboration with Earlham and Goshen colleges endures with the online Journal of Religion, Conflict, and Peace.

What do a nun, Batman and slime have in common?

U.S. Sen. Richard Lugar's commencement address topped a year of speakers who stirred conversations, emotions and even goofiness – from a "slime science" workshop for future teachers to the producer of Batman movies to the ultimate tree hugger, poets, photographers ... and an innovative nun who enthralled students.

“We just feel good about Manchester”

Wendell '58 and Marcia Taylor '59x Dilling found each other in the Manchester College chemistry lab and together found career success at The Dow Chemical Co. in Midland, Mich. “My success as a chemist is due to the education I received at Manchester,” says Marcia.

“When we went to College, we each received small scholarships. We feel like we have a debt to pay for such a great education,” adds Wendell. “The faculty members did a tremendous job preparing us for our future.”

The couple donated a room in the Science Center and enjoys keeping abreast of the ongoing improvements at Manchester. They fund scholarships for elementary education and chemistry majors, and are members of the Otho Winger Society. In retirement at their mid-Michigan home, Marcia enjoys photography while Wendell, a former Spartan, has a sizeable collection of medals for his successes in the Michigan Senior Olympics. The Dillings say their Manchester College experience is worth more than any sum of money. “From Day One, I felt welcome,” notes Marcia.

“It was a place for a good education, building relationships with professors and getting extra help when we needed it. We just feel good about Manchester. We always felt good about Manchester. We still feel welcome when we come on campus today.”

Philosophical about Philanthropy

Analyzing a philosophy of giving is difficult, even for a philosopher. Professor Steve Naragon '82 is a North Manchester native, alumnus, faculty member, father and donor. "Giving is a moral obligation for me," says Naragon, who with his wife, Dr. Pam Higgins, a family physician with the Manchester Clinic across the street, have supported the College in a variety of ways for years.

Naragon's connection to MC and the community traces back generations. His parents, Ralph Naragon '58 and Ramona Naragon-Sive '58, are Manchester alums, as well as his brother, Dan Naragon '79, and sister-in-law, Willoughby Yount '77 Naragon, and his grandparents, Esther Keim '31 and D. Stanley '29 Houser.

Naragon returned to his alma mater in 1991 to teach. "If it is worthwhile to work for and give your life to the College, then it is worthwhile to support it financially as well," he says. That philosophy resonates with funding foundations that consider employee financial support proof the College is worth their donations, too.

The couple has given generously to many initiatives on campus: the Physicians Atrium of the Science Center, the January session Medical Practicum to Nicaragua, Wine Recital Hall, The Manchester Fund, and especially the Gladdys Muir Endowed Peace Studies Department Chair founded by the Plowshares grant, which has expired. "Here, the faculty is in it for the long haul," says Naragon. "We hold a sense of importance for the place."

of Ford Meter Box Inc., just down the highway in Wabash, Ind. “A residential campus brings good people and good families to a community.”

Ford Meter Box, a leading manufacturer of water distribution pipeline and products, was founded in the late 1800s in the ideas and dreams of Ford’s great-grandfather, Edwin Ford. The company remains vibrant today, with new products dedicated to a quality water supply. Wabash County’s largest employer and its president generously share their successes with the community.

Sense of Community Focuses Giving

“There’s an appeal in supporting a college or university in one’s own back yard,” muses community philanthropist Steve Ford, president

Steve Ford, who is not a Manchester graduate, considers his civic and College investments good business decisions. “From an economic development perspective, a college imports capital from beyond the immediate area,” he explains. “The fact that Manchester College makes its buildings and programming available to the community is more helpful than one might think.”

A former member of the College Board of Trustees, Ford is confident his gifts will be handled with care, noting, “the College has a modest endowment and a history of using its resources frugally.”

“It is a privilege to be associated with the College,” insist Ford and his wife, Lisa, who are much more comfortable with the label community minded, than philanthropist.

Creative Solutions for Student Success

Jan Clark '69 Johnston believes in the value of a Manchester education. "Everything you do is about starting with values. Manchester is grounded in its value system." The psychology major remembers well her Manchester mentors who surrounded her with the right values and ethics about life.

Jan and Mark E. Johnston '68 were campus sweethearts. Together, the couple made a number of significant contributions to the College before Mark's passing in 1999, but his passion was for entrepreneurship. "Mark always wanted to train creative leaders, and really wanted to see a successful entrepreneurial program at Manchester," Jan says, noting he researched programs at other schools. Jan kept the dream vibrant, endowing not only the Entrepreneurship Exploration Fund but also the Mark E. Johnston '68

Professorship in Entrepreneurship to develop honest and innovative leadership in students of ability and conviction.

The Johnstons remember friendships and learning at Manchester. "There were, and still are, so many great professors at Manchester," Jan says. "They must have really made an impact or I wouldn't be able to talk about them so fondly 40 years later!" She credits Professor Emeritus of Psychology Donald L. Colburn for helping to mold her into the family psychologist she is today, and has endowed a scholarship fund in his name. When Mark's good friend and roommate, S. Bruce Kauffman '68, died in 1996, the couple endowed a scholarship fund in his honor to help financially strapped students study abroad.

Faithful annual donor, with his wife Sara Steiner '96 Larco, to The Manchester Fund since graduation

“Manchester College provided me financial aid while I was in school. So it’s the right thing to do, to pay back my dues. In addition, Manchester is where I spent four of the best years of my life. I’d like for others to have the same chance.”

A Manchester Legacy Impact

Cynthia Hoff '85 Trochu still remembers standing outside the College Union, excitedly reading her acceptance letter to law school at Southern Methodist University. The Hoosier history and political science major never imagined she would make her home in Dallas, where today she is vice president and assistant general counsel for Texas Instruments.

“Education can change the life of not only that one person, but also the entire family for generations. It has a legacy impact,” she explains.

“These are exciting and dynamic times for the College,” notes the member of the Board of Trustees, adding, “I am impressed by how Presidents Switzer and Marden have put Manchester on the map. I am proud to be associated with the school for its social impact, accomplishments and number of first-generation students who succeed.”

The Hoff conference room in the College Union honors her grandfather, MC English professor Lloyd Hoff '21 and her father, the late David Hoff '60. She annually remembers her alma mater with gifts to The Manchester Fund, in addition to her Board and committee service. Her commitment to making this world a better place extends beyond Manchester. The Dallas Business Journal has recognized her as one of its 25 “Women to Watch” for her contributions to society.
