Higher education has received some negative media attention over the past year, and this magazine is a wonderful reminder of what is going right at one good college! Guided by our strategic plan, we are committed to our mission, and we work every single day to help our students learn.

You will learn in this issue how our new advertisements to prospective students are messages from our own real-life students who tell what they "found" here. Their messages could have been written by our graduates from decades ago because they focus on friendships and faculty and being able to ask good questions.

You will also learn about one of the most exciting art acquisitions in the history of Manchester College - a brilliant triptych by art Professor James R.C. Adams. The paintings are in the Science Center Physicians Atrium and have stimulated some terrific conversations about the hidden scientific messages. We hope you will come to campus to view it. This is Professor Adams' 50th year on our faculty.

A college that is in its 117th year has faced many transitions, and some of our newest ones are highlighted in the stories about

- Professor Dagny Boebel's retirement from the English Department,
- a redesign of our accounting requirements to serve our students who continue to outperform most universities on the CPA examination,
- the creativity of the Manchester Symphony Orchestra to incorporate original artwork by alumna Karen June Klimpert '85 into a performance, and
- a rich array of updates about alumni and friends.

This academic year already has been filled with new ventures, and we look forward to the months ahead. If you are ever able to visit campus, please do! The chime still rings in the morning and evening.

INTERNATIONAL FASHION SHOW STRUTS 27 COUNTRIES ONTO RUNWAY

It was a full house for the Dec. 1 modeling of traditional clothing from 27 countries at the annual International Fashion Show. Even the men's basketball team was in the audience – to show support for the international diversity of campus.

"Today we celebrate life," said Jacquilline Nagila of Kenya, director of multicultural services and campus diversity, at the show. "We want to acknowledge the beauty in each of us."

Almost 5 percent of MC students are international, from 27 countries. "We hope we can help to develop an international awareness in the community, and we hope we can help our students realize there is a world outside campus," said Nagila.

EDUCATION STUDENTS HAVE INDIANA'S"OUTSTANDING SEA CHAPTER"

Manchester College has the top Student Education Association chapter in the state, says the Indiana SEA, a student program of the National Education Association.

As Outstanding SEA Chapter Spring Semester 2006, Manchester had the most interesting programs, active membership and demonstrated professionalism in education, announced the Indiana SEA at its Oct. 21 fall conference.

6 MANCHESTER MAGAZINE

The chapter has 109 students, said President Jeanna Collins '08 of Bourbon, Ind., an education major.

Chapter members tutored children twice a week for 11 weeks to learn about curriculum and standards in today's classroom and worked with an MC science faculty member on three experiments youngsters could do in the classroom. Chapter activities included one-on-one connections with area mentally retarded residents on a prom-type dance, dinner and a luau.

MC TAKES THIRD IN INDIANA CPA SOCIETY FINALS

Manchester took third place at the finals of the Indiana CPA Society Case Study Competition on Nov. 3. Manchester's four-student team was one of six teams selected to give oral presentations for the finals in Indianapolis.

This was the College's third trip to the finals, all advised by Heather C. Twomey '96 '97ma, associate professor of accounting. Manchester took third place in 2004 and 2001.

This year's team, selected by faculty, consists of David P. Brown '07 of Granger, Ind., Ashley M. Davis '07 of North Manchester, Jodi M. Dell '07 of Rochester, Ind., and Tiffany K. Portz '07 of Warsaw, Ind. All are accounting majors.

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS FLOCK TO SPARTAN DAYS

Almost 200 high school students and their families and guests came to see why U.S. News & World Report ranks Manchester College as a "Great College at a Great Price." MC hosted two Spartan Days for prospective students this fall, on Nov. 11 and Nov. 18.

Students toured campus; met MC students; discovered academic, international, athletic and extracurricular opportunities; learned about scholarships and financial aid; and talked with admissions staff.

High school students always are welcome to visit Manchester College! They can make appointments at admissions.manchester.edu

MC SENDS BIRTHDAY GREETINGS TO ITS FRIENDS AT THE UNITED NATIONS

Zach Burton '06 and Ben Leiter '06

Members of the Manchester College community sent a birthday banner of personalized greetings to the United Nations for its 61st anniversary on Oct. 24, 2006. Students, faculty and staff signed the banner and shipped it off to the United Nations.

Manchester is the only college in the United States to hold permanent observer status with the United Nations, as a Non-Governmental Organization (NGO). This status gives Manchester College representatives access to U.N. proceedings and, with permission, opportunity to actively debate issues on the floor of the U.N. General Assembly.

Peace Studies faculty and staff members annually attend an annual NGO conference, and Ardon Denlinger '59 of New York City, our Peace Studies Institute NGO public information representative, regularly attends briefings.

Manchester College also is home to a Model United Nations, with a goal of preparing a new generation of leaders who could make this world a better place. "Our students gain valuable skills, such as communication and conflict resolution, as well as working knowledge of international diplomacy and negotiation," said Dr. Benson Onyeji, program director.

U.S. SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE VISITS, PRAISES MANCHESTER

Former U.S. Speaker of the House Dennis Hastert, a lifelong pal of Athletics Director Tom Jarman, spent a morning on campus on Aug. 31, meeting with a few dozen business and community leaders, students and other friends of the College.

During speeches at a breakfast and a luncheon, the Speaker praised Manchester's connections with business and industry. "What this school is doing, I think, is outstanding," he said, commending the College's "extraordinary president, Jo Young Switzer. She's opened the doors and reached out to the community."

The Speaker stressed the importance of the mentoring, internships and pre-career experiences available to Manchester students, noting Paul Sorenson '05 did just such an internship in his office. "Now he is one of our trusted and very valued staff members."

U.S. Rep. Dennis Hastert has served more than 20 years in Congress, eight as Speaker. During his stay in North Manchester, he autographed copies of his book, Speaker, Lessons from Forty Years in Coaching and Politics, for the guests. (The book includes Jarman, who also has been interviewed by The Washington Post about his friend.) The Speaker is no stranger to MC; the former wrestler has talked with Coach Jarman's wrestling teams over the years.

POPULAR COLLEGE GUIDE HELPS US SPREAD THE WORD: MANCHESTER IS A "GREAT COLLEGE AT A GREAT PRICE"

Students seeking a comprehensive undergraduate degree in Indiana will get the best value at Manchester College, reported one of the most popular college rankings. In its 2007 study of "Great Schools at a Great Price," U.S. News & World Report ranked Manchester third among 107 Midwest comprehensive colleges.

In addition, Manchester is 20th among the "Best in the Midwest," of comprehensive colleges. The magazine uses 15 indicators of academic excellence and bases 25 percent of its ranking on the opinions of presidents, provosts and deans of peer institutions.

Manchester gets high points for its low facultystudent ratio (1:14), peer assessment and its generous alumni giving rate (31 percent). "It's especially rewarding to know our peers have such high regard for our programs," said David F. McFadden, executive vice president for the college. "We're thrilled to be near the top of the Best Value list year after year." (This is the 12th consecutive year for the College.)

LEADING ADVOCATE OF INDEPENDENT COLLEGES DELIVERS THE HARRY H. HENNEY '35 LECTURE

"Private colleges in North America are doing very well," the president of The Council of Independent Colleges told a Manchester College audience for The Henry H. Henney '35 Lecture on Oct. 19. "It does appear that graduates of private colleges become better citizens," Dr. Richard Ekman said, adding, "Private colleges do this best of all."

Dr. Ekman also told the audience that private college students have a better chance of graduating in four years - no matter what the characteristics of the students tracked, from SAT scores to firstgeneration status. The key difference is that private schools provide an "interactive' education, he said. Highly respected as an advocate for independent colleges, Dr. Ekman has served in leadership positions for the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation. Founded in 1956, The Council of Independent Colleges represents 570 independent colleges and universities.

Dr. Jane E. Henney '69 established the lecture to honor her father and his 40 years as a northern Indiana educator. Henry Henney, 93, and his wife Jeanette reside in Woodburn, near Fort Wayne. Dr. Henney is senior vice president and provost for health affairs for the University of Cincinnati.

RE-ACCREDITATION ENSURES MC ATHLETIC TRAINING MAJORS CONTINUE TO STRETCH THEIR OPPORTUNITIES

The Commission on Accreditation of Athletic Training Education has re-accredited Manchester's athletic training major through the 2009-2010 academic year, when the commission will conduct another comprehensive evaluation. The accreditation brings the support of The American Academy of Family Physicians, The American Academy of Pediatrics, The American Orthopaedic Society for Sports Medicine and The National Athletics Trainers' Association, Inc.

Commission Chair Paula Turocy commended Manchester for its "commitment to the advancement of quality education in athletic training, as well as your dedication to the preparation of highly qualified athletic training professionals."

Manchester has 47 athletic training majors this year, said Professor Mark W. Huntington '76, director of the program. Huntington started the program in 1984; today, the program has three full-time faculty members and five adjunct faculty members. Fifty-five MC grads are certified athletic trainers.

FALL PLAY ABOUT THOREAU, REBELLION AND INDIVIDUALITY

Writer Henry David Thoreau spent a night in jail in 1846 for refusing to pay his taxes. He did not want his money spent to help finance the war against Mexico. In 1971, playwrights Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee drew upon that rebellion to protest the Vietnam War in The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail – Manchester College's fall 2006 play. "I've known about this play for many years," said Theatre Director Scott K. Strode. "The content is appropriate for the College and for the current war situation."

The curtain rose on three performances during Homecoming 2006 weekend at the College.

ACLU PRESIDENT DISCUSSES FREEDOM OF SPEECH WITH STUDENTS

"Manchester College's mission statement overlaps with many aspects of civil liberties and ideologies," the president of the American Civil Liberties Union noted during convocation on Dec. 4.

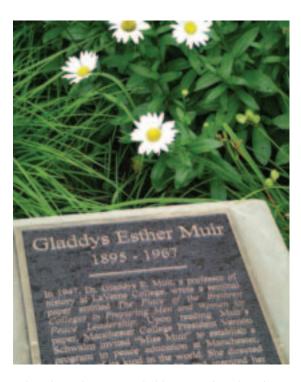

Nadine Strossen, who leads the 600,000-member ACLU, was on campus for a day of dialog with students and faculty about freedom of speech. The day began with convocation attended by 800 students, faculty, staff and guests. Later, students in first-year colloquium met with her for questions and answers, and colloquium faculty joined her for lunch.

Strossen noted that support for freedom of speech cuts across political lines and ideological lines, giving examples of U.S. Supreme Court decisions and conservative justices. "Our First Amendment clients span the range – from abortion rights activists to neo-Nazis," she said, adding that students frequently are ACLU clients.

PASTOR CHINWORTH REMAINS CLOSEBY AS PHILOSOPHICAL THEOLOGIAN ACCEPTS CALL TO MC

Campus Pastor Jim Chinworth ended more than eight years with the College in January, when he became associate pastor for youth ministry and congregational life for the Manchester
Church of the Brethren.

Philosophical theologian Steven Crain will be the next campus pastor, on July 1, after he fulfills his teaching commitment to the University of St. Francis in Fort Wayne.

Dr. Crain, who is seeking ordination in the Northern Indiana District of the Church of the Brethren, is an assistant professor of philosophy and theology with considerable faculty experience at other faith-based universities.

He has a bachelor's degree in physics from Stanford University, a master's from Fuller Theological Seminary; and a master's and Ph.D. in theology and a master's in history and philosophy of science from Notre Dame.

Pastor Chinworth, whose insightful prayers have opened scores of campus ceremonies and celebrations, led development of the annual community Martin Luther King Jr. service, student involvement in spirituality groups and Holocaust remembrance programs. His work on dissipating liberal-conservative tension on campus was influential in a new format for acclimating first-year students to academic life. The campus religious life program, led by Chinworth, included weekly chapel services, retreats and Bible study, and other spiritual development and enrichment. Associate Chaplain Sonia Smith will serve as interim pastor.

PROFESSOR JIM ADAMS UNVEILS PAINTINGS FOR SCIENCE CENTER

By Kelli Griewank '08

What do art and science have in common? Just ask Professor James R.C. Adams, who on Oct. 26 unveiled his highly-anticipated artwork commissioned for hanging in the Physicians Atrium of the Science Center.

For 18 months, Adams worked at his home, concocting the perfect formula for the paintings to celebrate the $17 million Science Center, dedicated Sept. 16, 2005.

Adams calls his artwork "semi-abstract" and "colorful in a dramatic form." It actually is three interrelated paintings, each on a 4-foot Masonite square, each depicting a natural science, each underlined in bold, symbolic colors. Mathematics is an underlying feature of them all.

Adams' paintings are perfect for the Science Center, says James T. Streator, professor emeritus of chemistry.

"His understanding of essentials of mathematics and science, his sense of humor and his love of color show through wonderfully in these paintings. They serve well to welcome you to the Science Center, where mathematics and science are both taught and practiced but also where art is appreciated."

Adams has invited the College community to scrutinize the artwork for its symbolism - of the sciences, art, vision, proportions and music in a true liberal arts composition. Send your thoughts to him at jrcadams@manchester.edu. He promises to "tell all" at the Feb. 19 convocation. The triptych is untitled, at least for now.

The project challenged the artist. "While some passages resemble Jim's landscape style, this triptych represents a significant stylistic departure," said music Professor John H. Planer, who teaches a humanities course in the arts.

Adams changed his mind several times to find the right formula for the Science Center. "I normally paint a clear-cut object, such as a landscape," he said. "This project was different because it was a composite with lots of characters. Initially, I decided I wanted to paint one big mural, and then I decided to do something with a few smaller pieces and link them to each other visually." He began by designing small drafts to test his ideas. When he began working on the actual project, he hit road blocks and decided to start all over again.

The painting was agonizing, he said. "Amateur painters do it for relaxation. I don't. I can't relax when I'm painting. On the other hand, when I complete a painting that I like, then the struggle seems worth it, but during the procedure, I am not relaxing; I am agonizing. Painting is like an adventure I had once in Bolivia, if you get through it, it's a great experience."

Artist Adams, recognized by Congress as the 2002 U.S. Professor of the Year, knows the natural sciences and admits he likes reading Scientific American more than Art News. "I've always been interested in how things work," he explained. "My favorite classes in school were chemistry and physics. I liked them because they were not vague; things could be proved or disproved and I like the way scientists write."

Adams, fluent in several languages, teaches figure drawing, art and life, camera techniques, artistic restoration and conservation, and experiencing the arts. This January Session, he is taking his classroom to Italy. Several other Adams' paintings hang in the Science Center, as well as in private collections in England, Spain, Mexico, Germany and throughout the United States.

NEW LEADERS STEP UP TO BOARD OF TRUSTEES

The Board of Trustees has three new officers for 2007.

The new board chair is Rufus B. King Jr. '67 of Friendsville, Tenn., a retired executive vice president and chief credit officer for First American National Bank in Nashville. The business and economics major at Manchester earned an MBA from University of Tennessee. Rufus and Rebecca Kintner '67 King have two grown sons. King is a Trustee-At-Large.

King is pictured here with President Jo Young Switzer and 2006 Chair J. Bentley Peters '62 of Elgin, Ill.

Joining the board leadership are Trustees Carolyn Moldenhauer '61 Hardman of Indianapolis as vice-chair and Dr. Harriet A. Hamer, M.D. '80 of South Bend as secretary.

Hardman, a Trustee-At-Large, is a former middle school and high school teacher with a master's degree in social work from University of Connecticut. The devoted contributor to the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra also has sat in on 78 classes during her MC campus visits! Carolyn and Donald Hardman, M.D. '59 have three grown children.

Dr. Hamer, also a Trustee-At-Large, is chief of anesthesia for Michiana Anesthesia Care at Memorial Hospital in South Bend. She also has served the College as president of the Alumni Board. A biology-chemistry major at Manchester, she earned her medical degree at Indiana University School of Medicine. Dr. Hamer also is active in church leadership at the Crest Manor Church of the Brethren.

Jack A. Gochenaur '70 continues to serve as board treasurer. He is vice president of finance and treasurer for the College.

IT ALL ADDS UP!

MANCHESTER'S NEW 150-HOUR ACCOUNTING PROGRAM: PERFECT FOR THE PROFESSION AND FOR STUDENTS

anchester College's new 150hour accounting program seems tailor-made for Nickolaus R. Cripe '06 of Goshen, who will begin his new career with a nationwide CPA firm in January, primed to take the grueling exam to become a certified public accountant.

Cripe came to Manchester to pursue a master of accountancy but made a smooth transition to the much shorter 150-hour program when it was announced last spring while he was interning with the Fort Wayne firm of BKD, LLP. The accelerated program is putting him into his career (and earning a paycheck) nine months earlier. He's pleased, and so is BKD, which will have a new employee in time for the busy audit and tax season.

For students, employers and Manchester, the 150-hour program makes sense, said Janis Fahs '82, CPA, coordinator of the 103-student program. The new program ideally positions Manchester College students in the job market well-prepared for certification as public accountants, said Fahs.

The timing is perfect: "Firms are scooping up competent accountants right now. Firms don't want to wait for a master's degree; they want them now," she said, pointing to new accounting regulations and accountability pressures on businesses and organizations.

Those pressures likely will increase the demand for CPAs, said Gary M. Bolinger, CAE, president and CEO of the 7,500-member Indiana CPA Society. "The Manchester College 150-hour program for students pursuing the CPA designation is of great value in filling the need for future CPAs," he said.

Students need 150 credit hours and a bachelor's degree to qualify for the four-part CPA exam in Indiana. They typically would complete Manchester's new program in 4½ years – in December, ready for the busy season. Those who take summer and January session classes could finish in as quickly as four years. They could receive a bachelor's degree after successfully completing 128 credit hours; or wait until completing the additional 22 credit hours required to apply for the CPA exam.

Manchester's accounting program is recognized as one of the finest in the state, and its graduates are heavily recruited. "We take great pride in graduating students who possess the work ethic, the maturity, and the educational foundation necessary to make immediate positive contributions to the accounting profession," Fahs said.

After surveying regional and national accounting firms, Manchester suspended its master of accountancy degree. Many firms do not pay higher starting salaries for a master's degree, nor do they consider it for promotions.

The opportunities are vast for CPAs, who serve as trusted business advisors, strategic thinkers and problem solvers. For more about Manchester College's accounting programs, visit www.manchester.edu or contact Janis Fahs, CPA, at jkfahs@manchester.edu or 260-982-5300.

"Accounting is the department flagship, and we are committed to maintaining and building upon the standards of excellence that Art Gilbert established many years ago," said Jan Fahs, chair. Arthur L. Gilbert '53, professor emeritus, created the accounting and master of accountancy degrees at Manchester College, building a CPAreadiness program whose graduates populate accounting firms across Indiana.

GREASE to BIODIESEL

hat started curiously with a "What if?" is fueling student lab work, lessons in environmental science – and Manchester College lawnmowers, a maintenance van and leaf blowers.

What if the College converted that used vegetable frying oil from Chartwells dining service into biodiesel, wondered Jeff Osborne, assistant professor of chemistry. "The concept of taking a waste product, such as vegetable oil and converting it into something useful is what I like," the scientist noted.

Chartwells was happy to provide the cash and to part with its grease for education, and for stewardship – of the environment and the College's fuel resources.

Osborne found plans for an "Appleseed reactor" on the internet. The name is for the spirit of the reactor: that people should spread the recycling word like Johnny did his appleseed and make their own non-profit, biodiesel contraption.

The process is fairly simple: Osborne and a student researcher mix methanol and lye (sodium hydroxide) with the vegetable oil in an 80-gallon water heater for three hours, then pump the mixture into a separation tank. In the tank, the biodiesel rises to the top, and glycerol, which forms during the reaction, sinks to the bottom with other byproducts and is drained out. Then, the biodiesel is washed with water, turning it the color of honey – and not smelling a bit like diesel.

They are creating fuel so safe a curious animal could swallow a taste or two without harm. The fuel also is very difficult to ignite with a match. And the biodiesel actually can clean deposits out of the fuel tank.

Manchester is using its biodiesel in lawn mowers, leaf blowers, and some vehicles. The fuel requires Test runs began a year ago, when January Session students in Osborne's Chemical Science class first poured their experiment into an engine. Troyer is still pretty sneaky as he oversees the biodiesel fueling of MC equipment. He doesn't tell machine operators they are running biodiesel so they won't form preconceived notions about the fuel or how it affects their engines. He'll arrive at work at 5 a.m., just so no one sees which fuel he is pouring into the tanks.

So far - nary a complaint, although mower Carl Strike is quite certain he's whiffing French fries as he crisscrosses the campus mall.

Amanda Patch '08, a biology-chemistry major from Otterbein, Ind., is assisting Osborne - and helped demonstrate the project at what students say is one of the neatest convocations ever, with fireballs, a huge mower on stage, a boots-clad executive, explosions and fire extinguishers at the ready.

Patch has medical school in her future. "I'm doing this because I have to give back to Manchester somehow and this is a great way to do that while learning about chemistry and the various solutions to energy," she said.

What's in it for the College? A constant reminder of the possibilities of biodiesel as students, faculty and staff see mowing and leaf-blowing on campus. Good training in environmental science for students participating in the grease-to-diesel conversion. An environmentally cleaner campus and less landfill waste.

With assistance from its students, the College's Biology and Chemistry departments can produce about 100 gallons of biodiesel per month. (Each batch is 50 gallons.) To supply the College's need for 1,750 gallons a year would require larger equipment and a funding/staffing shift from the laboratory to the maintenance department.

And, of course, there's the math:

The College spends $2.60 to $2.80 per gallon for diesel. (Some already is manufactured biodiesel, Troyer notes)

The biodiesel costs 80 cents a gallon to make in the lab during the school year, for a maximum output of 900 gallons. That's a potential $1,800 savings for the College.

"Biodiesel is not the answer," admits Osborne, who is quick to note that MC academics are not getting into the fuel business. "But we have to do something different to help protect the environment."

> Fuel from waste vegetable oil is not a new concept to many Manchester College alumni. Ben Long '03 of North Liberty, Ind., is always on the alert for ways to live more sustainably - including feeding vegetable oil into his 1989 Volkswagen Jetta car. The peace studies major fires it up with diesel and then flips a switch to vegetable oil when his veggie tank is warm enough. He collects his oil from a Mishawaka recycling center.

ART MACABRE

Art alumna brings macabre dance to "life" for Symphony audience

The artistry of Warsaw teacher Karen June Klimpert '85 combined with many hours in area cemeteries and the aid of a Manchester art professor came to life Oct. 29 behind the Manchester Symphony Orchestra.

Klimpert created two dozen background paintings and 70 cels (acetate cellulose) overlays to "animate" skeletons for about 300 scenes that were projected for the MSO performance of Danse Macabre by Camille Saint-Saëns. She spent hundreds of hours on the project, often until the wee hours of the morning.

Art Professor Jim Adams assisted by photographing sections of Klimpert's scenes to create more background, and by synchronizing the video with the music. Klimpert and Adams volunteered to do the project with MSO Director Suzanne Gindin's blessing, financing it themselves.

Klimpert visited graveyards, getting ideas for the Dance Macabre music about Death arriving in a cemetery at midnight and playing a waltz on his violin. The dead rise from their graves to dance for Death. The music lasted only seven minutes but synchronizing all the clips with the music took many hours and $14,000 in professional editing equipment.

After the performance, Klimpert's work for the Danse Macabre was exhibited in Link Gallery on campus.

Klimpert is a 1985 art education graduate. She attended the American Academy of Art and has a master's in teaching and learning from Nova Southeastern University in Florida. She has taught in Warsaw Community Schools for 20 years, also helping with set production at the College. This was her third collaboration with Adams to provide visual accompaniment to music productions.

The Pathways program encourages Manchester College students to explore the intersection of faith, work and vocation through opportunities for service in the United States and around the globe.

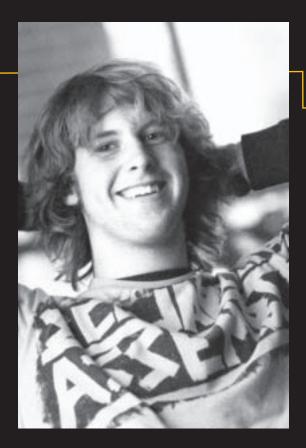

A gift or pledge to Pathways enables you to change the lives of not just Manchester College students, but the people who each volunteer serves in his/her Pathways experience as well.

Pathways helps students find their place in the world.

Manchester Lindsey-junior

If you were asked to complete this sentence, what would you say?

Would you echo current students and their parents?

How our students and their parents answered the "I found" question anchors a new marketing campaign that is practically writing itself. Junior psychology major Lindsey Bryant of Monon, Ind., told us:

"Manchester College has given me the chance to grow into who I am, without getting lost along the way. And while there have been challenges, there has always been someone – a friend or professor – ready to help."

The parents of junior English major Sarah Grieb of Kokomo wrote:

"Sarah certainly has thrived at Manchester College. It has seemed like a home away from home from her first day there. The College is a stimulating environment, where she has close contact with professors who are all enthusiastic about their fields ... maybe even best, is that she has made many friends."

How do we say "personal, inviting" in ways that resonate with college-bound students? How do we tout our 14:1 faculty-student ratio so we stand out among the crowd of small colleges? How do we assure parents that their students are safe? How do we advertise what defines Manchester?

With a remarkably simple, yet emotional, campaign: Find your place at Manchester College.

The real deal. No models. No slick editing. Soon, these messages will crop up in all kinds of places, all kinds of ways – starting in the mailboxes of prospective students and their parents. The possibilities are exciting!

The message is inclusive, just like Manchester. It invites students to create their own meaning at Manchester College ...

Find Your Place – so you can make a difference. Now.

Find Your Place – side-by-side with faculty.

Find Your Place – for studying abroad.

Find Your Place – with lifelong friends.

Find Your Place – close to home, but just far enough away.

Find Your Place – for fun.

Find Your Place – where you can be yourself.

Find Your Place – on the team, the committee, in leadership.

Find Your Place – at Manchester College.

Dagny BOEBEL

It is one of the rewards of knowing this extraordinary teacher of many subjects – to be able to explore and learn to genuinely appreciate writing at so many levels, Shakespeare in so many venues, British literature from the Middle Ages through the 18th century ...

"She has been in the forefront of our effort to show the importance of writing in all forms to Manchester students," said Dr. Glenn Sharfman, vice president and dean for academic affairs.

And, of course, she introduced Gender Studies with history teacher Dr. Mark Angelos in 1995 – a response to a student seeking to find her place (in this case, her perfect major) at Manchester College.

Many will be surprised to read that Professor Boebel is joining her husband and colleague Dr. Charles Boebel in his retirement from the Department of English at Manchester College – right after this January session.

She joined the Manchester community in 1986 with such energy that within eight short years, the College was nominating her for U.S. Professor of the Year. She has chaired the English Department since 1999.

"There are those who have the power to show students how to open their minds and think, and Dr. Boebel's students recognize that she is one of those professors," says English major Laura Beutler '07 of Roann, Ind.

"Her Bed Sheet Theatre in her Shakespeare classes – where real students read real Shakespeare plays wearing real bed sheets as costumes – taught students that Shakespeare was fun and wise and

"I count myself in nothing else so happy/ As in a soul remembering my good friends."

- William Shakespeare, Richard II

provocative and complex and ... did I already say it? .. fun," said President Jo Young '69 Switzer.

Travel played large in Dr. Boebel's teachings. She led her students to Shakespearean festivals and plays, seeking students' responses in assignments.

"The most important lesson students have taught me is never to give up on them," she said. The Boebel home was the place for student "comfort" gatherings, from The Gender Café and end-ofsemester celebrations to engaging book chats.

"I had class at her house more than in the classroom," recalls Kimberly Reinoehl '98. "She is that kind of person, the one who wanted to make sure her students felt welcome. She was always very encouraging, inspiring ... She made her students feel like good writers. Dagny encouraged me to think deeply about literature and the meaning of what I was reading."

Reinoehl presented a paper about Englishwoman Elizabeth Cary's 1613 The Tragedy of Mariam at a highly respected conference for the Committee for the Advancement of Early Studies. "I had a cross-> country meet the same day as the conference. I went to the conference instead and won with my writing."

Dr. Boebel began gender studies in response to student urging in the early

1982 English Department: Charles Daggett

90s, collaborating with Dr. Mark Angelos of the history faculty.

"She taught me lots of styles of teaching," said Dr. Angelos. "I only knew lecture styles before this course ... One time, instead of reciting poetry she wanted to use old songs, from 100 years ago to talk about gender inequality, and she sang them.

"The students weren't paying attention at first, and many were probably thinking, 'What is she doing?' But as she sang them, you could see how impressed they all were. She showed mastery, even when going out on a limb, to get the point across."

Traveling is a defining part of Dr. Boebel's life and teaching, and that will continue in retirement, especially when it puts her close to her four children and grandchildren. She has lived and spent much time in London and frequents Chicago and the Stratford Festival in Ontario for their gripping renditions of Shakespeare's classics.

The Boebels are also deeply involved in a unifying community theatre project in Mississippi. Charles composes plays based on stories gathered in the community, and the plays are produced by members of all segments of the community - young, old, disabled, black and white.

Jerusalem will also play large on their schedule. They spent last January there visiting their daughter Anne Boebel '90 Duffy, who works in the Consulate General of the United States with her husband Thomas, and in June they traveled throughout Israel and the West Bank. We wonder if it might be possible to establish a theatre project there similar to the one with which we are involved in Mississippi," she muses.

The editor is grateful to students in Beaté Gilliar's Journalism I class (and Oak Leaves staff) for contributing to this story: Tia Bringenberg '09, Laura Beutler '07, Amanda Foust '09, Erin Klepfer '09, Ashley Lampkins '08, Neil Rodenbeck '07, Nicholas Simpson '08, Logan Smith '10, Janaki Soman '09, Sana Szewczyk '10 and Cyndel Taylor '09.

NEW BASEBALL SCOREBOARD HONORS DEVOTED SUPPORTER

Manchester Spartans and fans have a new 10-inning baseboard scoreboard in a gift from long-time supporter Harlan Frick '63 to honor his father, the late Harold Frick. The Manchester Fund supporter died in Nov. 16, 2005. Harlan Frick, who taught physical education in East Allen County Schools more than 35 years and coached the Fort Wayne Harding Hawks, was the M Association's Claude Wolfe Coach of the Year in 1989.

GIVES BACK AS OFFICIAL AND PROFESSIONAL LEADER

COACH MARK MILLER '75

Rochester High School's head football coach and athletic director, Mark Miller '75, is the M Association's 2006 recipient of the Claude Wolfe Award for coaching excellence.

In his 31st year of teaching and coaching high school students, Miller also has served 14 years as an IHSAA wrestling official. Miller also has served as president of the Indiana Football Coaches Association.

He has coached at Brownsburg High School, Vincennes Lincoln High School and Pike Central.

Miller joined the Rochester football program in 1981, coaching the Zebras to a state championship in 1987, five sectional titles and two regional titles. His overall coaching record is 178-131, including a 165-114 record with Rochester.

As Rochester's head wrestling coach (1981-1989), he mentored 30 sectional champions, three regional champions, nine semistate qualifiers, three state qualifiers and a state place winner.

Miller and his wife Rebecca live in Rochester. Sons Marcus Miller '07 and Matthew Miller '09 play Spartan baseball.

Five wrestle, pitch, shoot, tackle to score Hall of Fame berth

Manchester College has five new members of its Athletics Hall of Fame: Nelson "Clint" Potter Sr. '34x, Bob Scheer '66, Nancy Sherrick '90 Taylor, DeAnn Booth '92 and Nick Primozic '98.

Clint Potter is the first Hall of Fame inductee to attend Mount Morris College, which merged with Manchester in 1932. Potter was a three-sport athlete – basketball, baseball and tennis, and was key to the Mount Morris offense during the two years he attended the College.

In his 14 years of pitching for the Major Leagues, he wore the uniforms of the St. Louis Cardinals, Philadelphia Athletics, Boston Red Sox, St. Louis Browns and Boston Braves. He died in 1990.

Bob Scheer was a four-year Spartan, serving as team captain and leading MC in tackles for two seasons. He has continued to be a generous supporter of Manchester College athletics for more than 40 years.

Scheer played for Coach Jack Jarrett from 1962 to 1965 and was a four-year starter. He is labor relations counsel for Smurfit-Stone in Walnut Creek, Calif., and a strong supporter of MC athletics.

Nancy Sherrick dominated the pitching mound in the late 1980s, twice setting school records for wins, collecting All-District and All-Conference honors in softball and making the HCW All-Conference volleyball team. She still holds softball records for most innings pitched (211.6), overall wins (20) and most career strikeouts (251).

She teaches Title 1 reading at Forreston Elementary in Ogle County Public Schools and lives in Polo, Ill., with her husband Lowell Taylor '91, and their two children.

DeAnn Booth was a standout in basketball and softball. Her offense helped Manchester to HCW conference championships in 1991 and 1992. She captained both sports, with numerous All-Conference and All-District honors.

Booth is sixth in all-time Spartan scoring for women's basketball and set records for most assists (322) and free throws (291). She was a career .464 batter, leaving her mark in MC records for hits in a season (70) and career (212), season batting average (.500) and career average (.464). Booth teaches mathematics and coaches girls' basketball at South Side High School, Fort Wayne.

Heavyweight wrestler Nick Primozic was a threetime All-American, qualifying for the NCAA Nationals four times, with two second-place finishes and a third place. He holds the school record for wins: 140-22, and helped MC to two Top 10 finishes at the NCAA Championships.

He placed second at Nationals as a senior in 1997 with an overall record of 36-2. Primozic is a lieutenant for the United States Navy and serves as an instructor pilot at the Naval Air Station in Pensacola, Fla., where he lives with wife Marisa Primozic '00 and their daughter.

Manchester Treasures

from the Archives

100 years ago

Among the treasures in the Manchester College Archives is this photo of a 1906-1907 class in Elocution and Physical Culture discovered by Archivist Jeanine Wine '76.

The College Catalog reported the course "... aims to help to an appreciation of literature and to teach young women and men to speak correctly; to speak clearly, and with an understanding of the words they use and the tones employed ... Instruction will be given in the use of the voice, the body, the positions of the arms, the feet and face expression ... He who speaks clearly and pleasantly and quietly and calmly is also learning to live pleasantly and quietly and calmly."

Students practiced (according to the blackboard) emotions ranging from anticipation, hesitation and contempt to grief, madness, dejection and devotion.

The Archives in Funderburg Library is available on appointment for research. The Archives encompasses Manchester College and Church of the Brethren materials, including documents, photos, writings, memorabilia, periodicals, correspondence and annual reports. It also features a collection of rare books, Bibles, hymnals and genealogical material.
