LIB-210 Banned Childrn's Literature (3 Credits)

Add Course to Plan

Censorship in public schools is an ongoing and challenging issue. What constitutes "appropriate" reading material? Who decides what is and is not "appropriate?" How do values and morals impact such decisions? The goal of the course will be to explore and analyze a variety of child and adolescent literature which has been historically banned, the nature for such decisions and the implications of those decisions historically, socially, culturally and politically. Censorship will be examined, analyzed and evaluated from multiple perspectives, and in the process of this exploration, class members will clarify our own values about the role of literature in shaping youth. C-4LT.

LIB-200 Libraries & Literacies (3 Credits)

Add Course to Plan

This course provides an overview of the knowledge and skills required to work in academic, school media, public and special libraries, as well as museums, archives and other information professions. Students will analyze the roles these institutions play and the ethical, legal and security issues that exist in today's digital society. Students will learn to locate, evaluate and utilize information effectively, and the final project will require them to design a tutorial that integrates course concepts and demonstrates skills that can apply to a number of information professions.
